The following description of the following was written by a countryman to lilling? was written by a countryman to swife, in this city, a few days since:

When farmer boys to poets turn.
And the gods of rhyme their gizzards burn;
And the gods of rhyme their gizzards burn;
When thousants too grand for simple prose
Do from their very flugers coze.
What sweet relief! what sovereign balm
Are pen and ink to soothe and calm.
Your loving hus, to-night foth feel,
Dear A., the nuse from head to heel;
And led to the same he must.
Or else his corps is bound to "bust."
This morn at 4, old Stumpy John
Came stumbling o'er, with Charles, his son,
And Luke and Steve, my trusty pair,
Who drive and plough, as you've aware;
With Jim, of slow and solemn pace;
And Burt, who seldom laves his face,
Did to the hog-pen weud their way.
To fix for work at peep of day.
The porkers all were lying sung.
As doth a bur upon a rug,
And pigza and sows, all seeming sungger
Than did the worthless, wandering bugger
Who roused them from their good, warm heap,
'Midst angry grunts, act loud but deep.
The wood, already piled, was lighted;
They then did see, or thought they saw,
What this unusual stir was for.
The dry-wood added to the fire,
Made it pop and blaze up higher;
The knives, with harsh and grating sound,
Upon the stone were sharply ground
To fit them for the bloody strife
Which soon came off 'twixt beg and knife.
The water, too, that healthful drink
Which some are brutes enough to think
Is only fit for washing clothes.
Or tathing hands, or feet, or toes,
Was brought by Luke, or Jim perchance,
From a limpled, gargling, neighboring branch
And ponred within an ample pot,
When glowing irons made it bot.
'Midst grunting hogs and grating knives,
In constant terror of their lives:
'Midst water bot and crackling fire,
Your husband, lord of all he saw,
In clarion tones proclaimed the law:
"Every man must do his best,
And some must do much better, let
The head, that part so hard to clean,
Should make mine ancient cook feel mean,
In case, upon occasion Steven. Burlon, Luke, and all.
Including Bhi and Stumpy John,
And not excluding Charles, his son,
Upon the fence and in the pen
Went more like squirrels than like men:
Your humble peet, knife in hand,
Most loudly cheered the gallant band;
They selzed upon the barrow tall.
And made his lease of life quite small; And mane his take of the dance I went,
As on some deed of goodness bent,
And promptly steking out the seat
(Way thro' the fat, into the meat.) of vital energy and life,
I plurged the sacrificial kalfe.
He quickly turned him on the floor,
A grunt, a groan, and all was o'er;
So did a hog, just made to eat,
Lay bleeding, dead, before my feet;
And as I looked upon the pain Lay bleeding, dead, before my feet;
And as 1 looked upon the pain
3de seemed to suiter, as again
He winced and groaned in bitter strife,
With his lingering, last farewell to life.
I remembered the life beyond the grave,
And the preclous souls men have to save.
Another hög of different age
Now quickly walked across the stage,
And others following fast and faster,
Met the same most sad disaster,
Until, in fact, in brief, in fine,
I'd killed the rascally twenty-nine.

A BAREBACK RIDER .- [From the Roches ter Democrat.]-Caleb Harris, of Hudson, Mich., bears off the palm from all competitors in the daring and romantic feat of bare-back riding. He left Buffalo on the 7th instant with two car-leads of cows purchased near Hudson, and destined for the fine dairy farms of Madison county, in this State. In the early part of the evening the long stock-train stopped at Fairport, as Mr Harris supposed, for supper, and he embraced the opportunity to look after the welfare of his stock, which was in the forward end of the train. Finding all in good order, he was about returning the rear of the train when unexpectedly th train started, and so rapidly that he deeme it hazardous to attempt to get on the caboose when it should reach him. Resolved not to be left, be mounted the train at the risk of life and limb, and commenced walk ing back to the caboose, when he fell and came near sliding off to the ground. He now resolved to make a virtue of necessity and ride to the next station "on deck." After braving the storm, and cold and wind a few moments he feared he might freeze to death in that exposed position, and finding trap-door on the deck of the sheep-car on which he stood he decided to "go below" and seek more comfortable quarters among his woolly fellow-travellers. Here he was foiled again, for the door, firmly fastened with ice or iron, refused to yield to his attempts to force it open. The only remain-ing chance was to "turn in" with his horned passengers snugly stowed away with "every sitting taken," as it seemed to any observer. It was short, quick work. The scuttle was lifted, and he alighted on the back of a frisky young Darham. She objected to his rude intrusion in her quiet coach, and commenced to kick. She squirmed and twisted and fidgeted till, finding all her efforts futile, she began to "bellow." It was no use. The frightened animal was in a tight place, and our bero was master of the situation, and fully determined to hold out and to hold on. Time seemed long, but on thundered the train. At length they arrived in Syracuse, where our friend found a release from his cattle-car "Pullman," to the joy no less of his companion in the caboose than of himself, and now congratulates himself as the champion bareback rider of the world. having ridgen fifty miles in three hours on
